TekCERT is designed to be a self-contained tool that is not only easy to use, but also requires no external tools to function. It acts as a certificate service, which in this case is in the form of a certificate signing tool. The program comes with features that include SSL/TLS, Extended Validation, and a number of other certificate types. These are explained and can be viewed in the main window. It also comes with some advanced features such as key generation, management, and import, encryption, as well as custom certificates. The program can be placed on a USB flash drive with a few files which will be stored on the temporary memory of the pen drive. It operates by double-clicking and opening the program. This isn't the first application that I've come across that claims to be a complete SSL/TLS certificate management application. There are others that are free, yet lacking such features. Yet they all have more bells and whistles than it would be fair for a small time investment, as well as other included applications or may have a bit more of a learning curve than TekCERT. In this case, I would recommend this because it brings everything you need in one compact and user-friendly application.
