Get the new Creative Cloud subscription experience .The present invention relates to the field of tank vessels, and more particularly to the field of marine propulsion vehicles. The invention specifically relates to devices for automatically deploying an adjustable snubbing line from a storage location to a winch on a vessel, such as a boat or ship. As is known, snubbing lines are commonly used on vessels to facilitate mooring operations. As is also well known, snubbing lines are stored on a vessel when not in use and are then deployed to the vessel by simply pulling them out of storage. Typically, when the snubbing line is no longer in use, it is re-coiled by allowing it to fall off the winch that is used to deploy it. However, in many cases, the snubbing line is no longer necessary for the vessel to moor, or can be re-used, at the next mooring site. As a result, 570a42141b
