Keyboard macro recorder for Windows and Linux. This application allows you to create keyboard macros that execute a specific set of actions on a key press. This is typically used for (insert automation here) and it should be disabled if your computer is a typewriter. Keyboard macros are much faster than using a mouse to click. So, if you are someone that can't figure out how to copy/paste/move/drag files or accidentally type on a powerpoint slides, you can use keyboard macros to save the time and energy. Keyboard macros can be recorded by two methods. The first method is to map the keyboard keys on the application. You will need to add the keyboard mapping that you wish to use. This method is for the most part straightforward but it is also possible to just press a special key to generate a keyboard macro. The second way is by recording keyboard macros in your desktop application. This method is good if your mouse doesn't work, your operating system does not have built in keyboard macros, and you need to make sure that the macro runs without error. How to use it: Select 'New macro' from the toolbar or hit CTRL + U. The 'New keyboard macro' dialog will open. The first option is to add the keys for this macro. Pressing any of these keys will run the macro. There are two buttons at the top right. One is 'Run' and the other is 'Exit'. Click on the 'Run' button and your macro is being recorded. To stop recording the macro hit the 'Exit' button. Click 'Finish' to close the dialog. IMPORTANT NOTE: Macro files must be saved in a readable format. Otherwise it is impossible to read and run them. The format used is 'aiff'. You can save as 'aiff' or use the SaveAs dialog to save as 'aiff'. Trial Version: You can try Keymacro in a 60 days trial version. The trial version is for all the operating systems including Linux. Keymacro FAQ: Does it have the ability to make macros on Linux? No, it does not. The reason for this is that Linux does not have a method of recording the macros. You will have to find a method yourself. Does it have the 1d6a3396d6
