The evil Behemoth caused devastation and death across the land. This dark and savage world inspired a new legend: the sound of what's left. The Remainder is a dark, surreal dream. There are no realistic weapons or armor. There are no women or children to save. No normal police to dispatch. There is only you. And all around you, just... just the sound of what's left. The Remainder is a place for your mind, your senses, and your soul. The title may be a reference to the "endgame" music of the same name from the Legend of Zelda series. It's the final battle theme that plays when Link reaches the end of his journey. The music and sounds are not meant to be taken as literal descriptions of what is seen. We've used a lot of organic sounds: wind, water, birds, the rustle of leaves, and so on. There are a lot of true sounds that make The Remainder its own thing - from water pouring, flowing, and hitting a stone, to a heartbeat, and even the weight of ice falling and hitting the ground. There are also silent areas with a mysterious feeling. All of the spots that are accompanied by silence carry a sense of mystery and dread, making them prime for creating unique environmental sounds that further reinforce this feeling. In The Remainder, your emotions play a key role. The music and sounds are layered in a special, complex way, complementing and enhancing each other to deliver an immersive, emotional experience. Story You are one of many survivors of the explosion that destroyed the airship that once brought civilization to the land. Suddenly, the great Behemoth has returned. There is no chance of escape. The only path is to charge forward and fight. You are outgunned and outmatched. A once-great civilization has been demolished, and there is no way to reach safety. You will have to fight on. After you start the game the game begins and the first thing you have to do is select an engine you want and then select the Character you want. When you come across a weapon or a door that you have to open a prompt will come up and it will ask what you want to do. I believe you have to touch different parts of the screen to find the buttons for select your character or the key. And then after that you will have to select the enemy you want to fight and then go into the combat, and it will show you the weapon and enemy you have. Then you will have to select the Weapon you want to use and when you do that it will ask you if you want to go for real or you can just do a practice shot. Then after that you just have to touch the screen in different parts to actually attack the enemy. Credits: The Game is created by Matt Grandjean, I took all of the programming for it, by myself. The graphics and editor is by me. I wanted to make a game that the public will actually remember. I was bored and Matt told me he had this idea to make a game. So me and Matt made this. Then the last stage of the project I did was making of all of the music in the game I made all of the graphics and the editor. I thought it was going to be harder than it was. I would like to say thanks to Matt for all of the help and support when I was making this game. We encourage you to contact us with any feedback, questions or enquiries. Thank you. Short video for fun. Just play a dumb video game like a "Nerd" or "Geek" and stop to use all the ninja powers and skills he has. There is no story. At least I could find one. I just played the game, watched it for a long time, and made a video. If you like it, just say so in the comments and do not get mad or angry. This game was made on the robot. There are only a few controls. Scroll the mouse wheel up and down. A and D or Arrow keys. Press the Esc key to
