ABOUT PLAYABLE CHARACTERS: For more details on playable characters, please see the Character Introduction post.

---ABOUT THE SKIN/FACE GENERATION--- AI technology ensures that the appearance and the general impression of NPC characters are similar, even after the character is created as a unique character in the game. However, it is possible that the appearance of a character in the game can be different after its creation, depending on a player's level and assignment of skills. Please also be aware that the appearance may differ slightly among regions. ---ABOUT EARLY GAMEPLAY---

During the early phases of game play, you will have a chance to play as other non-playable characters. However, the non-playable characters you can meet on your adventure will be consistent in appearance and will not change. ---ABOUT SKILLS---

You can acquire skills from your guild or through the Dragonguard. Please check the Skill Tree page for more details. ---ABOUT CHARACTER PARTICIPATION--- In accordance with the game's premise, the game's world is divided into several

---

While an in-game guild is open to all players, you will only be able to participate in events with other members of your guild or Dragonguard. ---ABOUT REGIONAL RATING--- The game world is divided into regions according to the country and language of the regions, each region having its own rating. Please visit to check your region's rating. ---ABOUT THE CLASSES--- Choose one of four classes (Marauder, Bard, Sorcerer, and Templar) and create a unique play style. ---ABOUT THE BLACK MARKET--- The Black Market has new items, weapons, and armor that you can obtain in-game. 'What really happened to the Queen?' Racist smears by a member of the public and police have sparked outrage after the death of the Queen's beloved corgis. A 78-year-old woman was left screaming that she had been racially abused after she called out a racist slur at a tribute to Britain's Queen Elizabeth II. Police are examining CCTV footage and ask that anyone who may have witnessed the incident take part in the investigation. She confronted an elderly black man who was walking down London's Regent Street shortly before the 100th anniversary celebrations of the Queen's accession. A witness said that the woman shouted 'what happened to the Queen?' at the man. Tearful: A Muslim convert, 36, was forced to cover his face in shame after a racist tirade hurled at him by a pensioner following the Queen's funeral. He was left red-faced after the incident at the service in Westminster Abbey which left a hushed crowd in tribute. The 60-year-old man was walking along Old Bailey Lane with a friend when the woman, 76, stopped him and started shouting. She is heard to have shouted: 'The Queen is black. The Queen is in a box.' 'What happened to the Queen?' she shouts. It is thought that the woman may have been trying to catch the man's attention, but he did not hear her and walked off quickly. The witness said he heard the woman shouting: 'She's black, she's black.' The man shouted back: 'No, the Queen is white'. 'What did you say?' the woman asks. 'Oh, well I didn't say that, what are you saying?' he answers. The witness said: 'He just told her 'you don't know what you're talking about, you haven't been alive, there's never been a black queen'. The woman then turns to her friend and repeats the racial slur to him. One woman was heard saying: 'That's right, the Queen is black.' 'That's right, I'm a Muslim convert, and she is black, I'm black and we're all in the same box. 'Oh, that is a good one,' the woman said. But the man replied: '

VeggieNomics: What is the molecular basis for the increased carotenoid production from palm oil by strain M1? The effect of replacement of coconut oil with palm oil in nutrient media on carotenoid production by Streptomyces cellulosa M1 was investigated. Replacement with 40% palm oil reduced the rate of total soluble protein by approximately 40%. The specific rate of growth was unaffected. Irrespective of whether coconut or palm oil was used as the sole carbon and energy source, total carotenoid production was inversely related to the rate of soluble protein formation. The specific carotenoid production was also inversely related to the specific rate of protein formation for the strains tested. The maximum total carotenoid production of 1.5 g/l was achieved with 40% palm oil in the presence of 20% sucrose. Cultivation in the presence of palm oil only decreased the total carotenoid production by 15%. The total carotenoid yield (42.5%) and carotenoid productivity (6.2 g/l/h) with 40% palm oil was five times greater than with coconut oil (11.2% yield, 2.0 g/l/h). Palm oil can be used as a cheaper alternative for carotenoid production.

Expression pattern of the epithelial cell adhesion molecule in normal, malignant, and stromal breast tissues. The epithelial cell adhesion molecule (EpCAM) is a transmembrane glycoprotein of the immunoglobulin superfamily, with a possible role in transcellular interactions and in the modulation of differentiation of normal breast tissue cells. The aim of this study was to determine the expression pattern of EpCAM in normal breast, normal adjacent breast, breast cancer, and breast lymph node tissues. EpCAM expression was evaluated by immunohistochemistry in 30 normal, 20 benign adjacent normal breast, 18 primary breast cancer, and 16 regional lymph node tissues. The expression of EpCAM was significantly higher in benign adjacent normal breast compared to normal breast ( $p = 0.02$ ), as well as to breast cancer ( $p = 0.000$ ), and lymph node tissues ( $p = 0.04$ ). The adjacent normal breast tissue showed significant correlations with normal breast tissue ( $r = 0.599$ ;  $p = 0.004$ ). The malignant tissue showed higher EpCAM expression compared to normal breast tissue ( $p = 0.012$ ) and lymph node tissues (
