Frans Timmermans, the European Commission vice president in charge of the European Union's civil service, said Poland was dragging its feet on changes required in a landmark ruling by the European Court of Justice in May last year. The ruling held that Poland's government had violated the constitutional rights of a Roma family by repossessing their home without due process, effectively in effect condemning them to homelessness. The Commission had argued that the court ruling was binding and could not be ignored.Learn Japanese in Japan for FREE with these Japanese language courses Learn Japanese with us for FREE for over 10 years!
