Why fantasy grounds?

Dungeon master Duncan Pitchford called me out in his blog in April this year, and confessed that he wanted to rebuild the Tactical,Maps,Dungeon tile board game. He wrote:
"Fantasy Grounds (at gameforge.com) has been a favourite of mine for ages, on the basis that it's fast, easy to use, and has vast utilities and plug-ins. One of my favourite plusses is how easy it is to generate maps using it.
I'd love to see Dave Morris make a Tactical Maps version using one of the fantastic hex/tile board games, to be released on the Kickstarter platforms a chunk at a time. He'd be spoilt for choice, the obvious choices being Dwimmermount and Pyramid Quest."

But Duncan is a big fan of tabletop gaming, and despite that (or rather, because of it), he also really wanted to make this game available to all his fans. He wanted to give tabletop gamers what they want, for any board game to come to life in an easy-to-use, cross-platform

There will always be tough situations in life and crane games are no exception. You will have to work hard and be careful. So we've decided to create a mobile game which will allow you to enjoy crane games right on the go. The first crane games you have seen were played on arcade machines and had a fixed crane and a crane operator. However, in our game, you will have a choice of the machine: * Drive a crane car. * A crane on a cart. * A crane on a locomotive. * A crane on a hovercraft. * A crane on a Segway. * A crane on a mobile crane. In each round, you will have to set the container on the indicated place to complete the next round. You will be able to choose the mode you will play in and the special feature. From the crane car driver to a top-model crane on a hovercraft, in crane simulator you will find every mode and variety. We have the following modes and features: 1) Crane Operating: Put the container on the places you have been given. You will have 2 minutes to complete each round. Collect stars to unlock the next round. As you advance through the modes, you will have a greater challenge. 2) Crane Operating – Hovercraft (available for any crane models): It's a hovercraft! You'll have to put the container on the places you have been given within 2 minutes. You won't have to worry about driving, in this game you will control a crane hovering a hundred meters above the water. If you put the container on the right place, you'll get to the next round. 3) Crane Operating – Containment Unit: You'll operate a crane with a containment unit. This mode is suitable for operators who didn't have time to test how long it would take to get to the next round. In this mode, you'll have to put the container on the locations given. 4) Crane Operating – Electric Tower: Operate an electric tower crane. You'll have to put the container on the places you've been given within 1 minute. 5) Crane Operating – Covered Elevator: Place the container on the staircases you've been given. You'll have to control a crane to put the container on the indicated places within 1 minute. During this time, the containers will be controlled c9d1549cdd Loading the player...Please make sure that the player is made from the Unity Asset Store. I am in discussion with Eric and as soon as I have resolved the issue I will post the new loading screen that Eric has created. I apologise for the delay but I am trying to find out the problem as soon as I can and I will resolve it as soon as possible. I have now confirmed that the player does not load as of now. As soon as I have worked out the problem I will send the new loading screen to you. Until then... To clarify, the issue that you have found is not to do with the Unity Asset Store and the player does not load for you. It is to do with our Unity Assets as a whole and not the Asset Store as such. As a developer, I can confirm that Unity Assets are not tested with every possible setting and environment, so it is quite possible that something is being missed by the Unity Assets.Q: Matplotlib savefig problems on OSX I've run into an issue where my matplotlib plots seem to be saved perfectly fine when I run them from the terminal or IDLE, but when I run them in the python script they are not saved correctly. The following is my code, which is run in a shell and when it's run in the python script it won't save. Any ideas? # Script where all of the figure saving takes place import matplotlib import matplotlib.pyplot as plt import numpy import os # Saving these as matlab.mat files would be ideal, but I'm just testing the.png files filename = os.path.splitext(str(os.path.basename(__file__))[0])[0] # This is a loop to test different numbers of figures for i in range(100): # This is where the for loop begins plt.figure() plt.grid() plt.axis('off') plt.xlabel('X') plt.ylabel('Y') plt.savefig(os.path.join(filename + ".png") Running it as a script will load the files perfectly fine, and I can even open them through the terminal/IDLE, however running

(unfinished) Editor's note: This article was written in 2013, and some of the terms have changed since it was first published. A year ago, Uno's Games released Zombie Maze, a multiplayer game with a lot of buzz and some inconsistency. Players try to get as far as possible in a maze by filling their maze with zombies that will eventually kill everything that isn't a zombie. Zombies themselves are spawned in the bottom left corner and move after the current player through the maze. Players with more zombies kill zombies closer to them and kill anything that isn't a zombie. Players find the exit at the top of the maze. Unfortunately, version 1 of this game has serious issues with very slow gameplay and networking. I've been playing the beta version of new version 2 for the past month, and I can tell you that version 1 was way slower, more frustrating, and had more bugs than version 2. My advice? If you haven't already, go back to version 1 and skip version 2. If you really want to play version 2, I'll give a basic overview of what's new, but I won't get into the deeper tricks and advanced strategies that are yet to be discovered. Multiple Rooms The first major change is the addition of multiple rooms. Initially there's only one room, but players can unlock these rooms by filling them up. There's 2x2 rooms, 4x4 rooms, and 8x8 rooms, with each size getting more zombies by default. The unlocked rooms are a little easier (namely, the ones with larger rooms) but the locking speed has also improved. Originally, if a player got killed, any zombies spawned after them would also immediately die, causing them to recast and spawn more zombies. Now, if you die your spawn count is reduced by 1 (so you spawn less zombies) while you're still dead. Once you're resurrected, you respawn and can continue your rampage. Even though you only have one room in version 1, there's still a way to have multiple rooms. In the bottom left corner, there's a small circle that becomes gray whenever you're in a multi-room, and most items like the red and blue dots and a bomb. If you use the red dot, you'll spawn a red zombie in the next
