in German. In Deutsch means he or she spoke/wrote in German, in general, not only in that particular situation/occasion. Example: Der Schüler ist schon in der Stube. You said: I've learned so far that when someone asks where something is, you can say ... (masculine) in der Schule, in der Stube etc. if something is at school, in a bar if it is in a bar. This is correct. If it's not for school and a bar, you need to use the location-specific words for the respective locations, e.g. Schule for school and Bar for a bar. Now, regarding what auf Deutsch means, you said: What I couldn't figure out is what is the difference between "auf Deutsch" and "in Deutsch". In this case, you should understand the verb auf Deutsch to mean specifically that something is in German, even though this is not the actual meaning of the preposition, but the implication of it being German.

Select.[Causes of death and analysis of risk factors in bronchial asthma]. A study of the causes of death in 548 patients with bronchial asthma has shown a rise in all-cause mortality (from 13.9 +/- 1.6 to 30.2 +/- 3.3 years), associated with a rise in the percentage of deaths of the lethal character and, consequently, a longer survival time. An analysis of the risk factors identified a connection with the age of the patients, duration of the disease and the year of the disease onset, type of the treatment regimen in combination with new drugs, and the percentage of the time spent in hospital.  $u, p \right) \left( \varrho_{+} \right) \left( \varrho_{-3} \right)$  for the ground state  $\left($

$\rho_+$  of the system. (We recall that the density matrix  $\rho$  is a Hermitian matrix  $\rho^\dagger = \rho$ .) The last relation is obtained from Eq. (3) after the substitution  $(c, d, a, b) \rightarrow (u, p, c, d)$  and a slight extension of the contour of integration. To determine the optimum in Eq. (4) for  $N=1$  as well as the optimum for  $N>1$ , one has to solve Eq. (3) for  $\rho_+$ . This is indeed a difficult task for general  $N$
