It is also a member of the Federation of Canadian Medical Colleges. History The college was established in 1987 by merging the Medical Society of New Brunswick's College of Physicians and Surgeons with the College of General Practitioners of New Brunswick. It is located in the historic G.S. Parizeau Building in Fredericton, formerly the home of Lieutenant-Governor Ambrose James Woolley. In 2017, the college opened a community health clinic and an interprofessional primary care clinic within the Erum Street Neighbourhood House.
