Three children with congenital cytomegalovirus (CMV) infection are reported. Two were women, the first one had a 16-week gestation and the second an 18-week gestation. Both patients were severely symptomatic at birth and the clinical diagnosis of CMV infection was subsequently confirmed. The third case involved a male infant. Blood samples were collected from these children at birth and at different times after birth. The samples were analysed by nested PCR and nested RFLP techniques to test for the presence of CMV DNA. In one case the viral genome was present in the blood from birth. The other two cases had positive CMV DNA until 10 days after birth, when the mother received immunoglobulin therapy. At 7 months of age the boy had seizures and neurological and audiological abnormalities, probably congenital. These were related to congenital CMV infection, and the children have been followed up to the present. The first patient was cured and the other two have been treated with ganciclovir. Estragole-induced expression of intercellular adhesion molecule-1 in human peripheral blood monocytes. The plant flavoring compound, estragole, is a potential causative agent for food-borne outbreaks of gastroenteritis. In this study we investigated the potential of estragole to induce inflammatory mediators in human peripheral blood monocytes (PBMC) and their relevance to the oral toxicity of estrag 6d1f23a050
