3) Where do I save the 'copy to clipboard' of the machine code when I have completed the donation/registration procedure. Would the machine code be a manual or manual .txt file that then needed to be copied into something else. I assume that the.txt file would then be deleted, where was it copied to. What happened to it. It does say that I will be given a code which will be sent via email, and I think that is to gain access to the aeroglass package. I could not find the aeroglass package in my downloads folder. 5) Will I receive the aeroglass package when I have completed the donation/registration procedure. .txt file that then needed to be copied into something else. Aero Glass Donation Key

C:\Library\AeroGlass\AeroGlass_readme\donation.info\key.zip ================================== Aero Glass Donation Key If you would like to get the Aero Glass, you need to download the "donation.info" and the"key.zip" files and place them in the root folder of the C drive called AeroGlass. This will be the root folder where you will have to install the AeroGlass software later. This folder and location will remain permanent until you request a new key. After you have received the "key.zip" file, you should place it on the same location. The "donation.info" will be used to complete the Aero Glass registration. 4) After the donation key is received or be provided with information to request one. is there an easier way just by selecting a set of aeroglass or preferably the key? I understand that it would require some information of my systems but am not on the air for this process or cannot buy the systems to do this. These are the instructions for Windows 10. the Aero Glass requires Windows 10 Aero DWM symbols. The difference between Vista and Windows 10 is that the symbols are installed at different places: in Windows 10, they are installed in the 32-bit DWM folder (C:\Windows\SYSTEM32). Windows XP does not have the symbols installed.
