The 9 Most Popular Health Apps for Android Users More than any other smartphone platform, Android has continued to grow in recent years, becoming the most dominant mobile OS in the world. Considering that we already have Google's mobile OS installed on millions of phones and tablets, the only logical question to ask is: How have the people on those devices been using the service? Because not only are Android users responsible for this growth in the first place, but they also have top utility apps installed on their phones, ones that most of us rely on to make life easier. As you're reading this, there are millions of Android users out there that have installed at least one app on their device. These are the most popular apps that we've found so far on our service - if you want to be a part of the crowd, you can download and install these apps for yourself by going to the Google Play Store. All the apps and other files that you access through Google Play are "cleverly" hidden from you at first, so you need to log into the service and download a file with a package ID in order to gain access to it. From here, you can open it and install on your phone or tablet. Since we've only recently started analyzing Android apps, we haven't included a health category in the following list; however, you'll notice that some of these apps actually have another category of their own. Nonetheless, you can also get the same type of analytics that we've done with thousands of health apps on Google Play, and you can also discover which are the most popular categories for health apps, too. 1. SleepWell Natural Sleep Tracker Do you have trouble falling asleep or staying asleep? Do you struggle with snoring? If you answered yes to either of these questions, you'll want to check out the natural sleep tracker we have right here on Android. Using sound wave analysis, this app is able to identify when your muscles are relaxing and falling asleep, as well as the patterns of your sleep. You can even set the alarm to wake you up and listen for snoring, while your phone will record your sleeping patterns so you can see trends in your own habits. 2. Jitterbug If you're like most people who want to improve their work/life balance, then you're going to need a distraction-free place to check email, get work done, and interact with friends and family. Unlike email, you can actually use your Android phone to keep calm, so this app has you covered here, too. You can access email, calendar, social media, and more, all with the push of a button. There are also some productivity tools like notes, reminders, and to-do lists. 3. MediBag We're all familiar with the pain that comes with trying to take care of our health. This is why we can't stress enough the importance of taking a few minutes daily to go to the doctor and get a checkup, and why we also recommend the importance of having a home detox center. Luckily, this is where MediBag comes into play - it's designed to help you with your home detox. 5ec8ef588b
