Guatemala has signed a Memorandum of Understanding with the United Nations to support the rights of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) people. The MoU comes at a time of intensive international efforts to promote equality for LGBT people. It marks an achievement for the Guatemalan government under állego president ántelo José Efraín Ríos Montt, who was set to assume the reins at the UN on December 8. Guatemala ratified the UN Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) and the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CERD) in October 2005, giving the General Assembly the power to decide whether it should be placed on the UN's agenda of non-member states. Guatemala became the last country in the Americas to ratify CERD, after Venezuela. The UN set up a committee to assess whether Guatemala complied with the CERD, which establishes the right to legal services for disabled people, and monitors access to justice for women, migrants, older persons and Indigenous people. The Guatemala government has been widely praised for its actions in ratifying the two conventions, making it the last country in the Americas to do so. La prensa internacional destac el hecho abundando en informacin recogida tras las protestas callejeras de hace casi dos aos que se sald con varias decenas de muertos y heridos. El gobierno de Daniel Ortega dijo en su momento que lo que se inici como una protesta contra una reforma al Instituto de Seguridad Social, fue aprovechada por elementos de la derecha aglutinados en movimientos sociales para intentar dar un golpe de Estado.
