After updating to Google Chrome 16, I noticed that embedded videos were no longer rendered inside a tab as a single window. I felt it would be easier to deal with the situation if each tab contained a separate window and the embedded video remained in the same window, like it did before. As Google's stated in their UserVoice post that they were working on a more cross-browser solution, I decided to write this simple application for the purpose. This application creates multiple windows, one for each tab that is open and one for the embedded video itself. It only needs the extension and the embedded video URL as parameters, and it handles the rest. The application also allows you to resize each tab, so that you can have a perfect fit. I believe this could be an even bigger improvement for the future. How it works:

===== Each time you run the application it creates one window for each tab, which allows you to keep embedded video and tab in separate windows, and each tab will have its own title and address bar. The embedded video will be shown in a window of its own, instead of being rendered in the same window as the tab. How to use it:

===== The application has two main parameters, the extension and the URL of the embedded video you want to detach. Just run the application in your browser and you will see a window for each tab. Then, simply close the tab you want to detach, and the video will stay in its own window. You can detach multiple videos at the same time. Also, you can resize each window independently with the resize parameter (default is 400x400)

documentation, I wasn't sure what the extension and URL would look like, so I decided to open some tabs in the same session to test it. I then realized that this application would allow me to easily detach and render videos to new windows without the need of having to manually update and refresh the page. I hope you enjoy using this application and I'm always open to improvements or suggestions in this topic. Keyboard Macro for Internet Explorer. To do: ===== 1. create a file in the Scripts folder: LogitechKeymacro.js. 2. save it with the "LogitechKeymacro" name and extension (.js). 3. add your mouse and keyboard macros and upload the.js file. 4. select the icon "LogitechKeymacro" in the tools menu. 5. open the Options panel and select the Main tab. 6. select "Script URL" and write "LogitechKeymacro.js" as the source of the script. 7. enable "LogitechMouse" and "LogitechKeyboard" for the option of your mouse and keyboard macros. 8. now the keystroke you typed in your macros will be executed as text and not as a macro in ie. Usage:

== 1. first, uncheck all the checkboxes (ie. LogitechKeymacro / LogitechKeyboc / etc)
2. select one option and click on "Import macros". 3. your macros will be imported and stored. 4. this is also where you can edit the macros and save them. 5. if you change something in the macro, reimport them. 6. if you don't like the options you've got, edit the macros, reimport and choose new options. 7. you can uninstall the macros in the LogitechKeymacro folder, delete the LogitechKeymacro.js file, but it's better to rename it. 8. if you want to test the macros, just check the "DetachAll" box and close the browser window. 9. to use the macro, just check the "Attach" box, write your code in the text area and click the button "Go". -- Configure options:
